

Richard D. Stow,
Director of Communications and Partner Relations
Coordinated Assistance Network

Richard Stow joined the Coordinated Assistance Network (CAN) as Director of Communications and Partner Relations in 2020. Richard's vast experience in corporate sales and establishing meaningful relationships are instrumental in expanding the reach of the CAN platform across the United States.

Prior to joining the CAN, Richard worked with companies in nearly every state while focusing on growing company market share through researching markets, identifying new business opportunities, training management staff, and implementing marketing campaigns. His production ultimately led to executive management where he became the regional operations manager for MagicOne where he also increased business by over 5,000%, in addition to establishing a customer service rating the company had not achieved on their own.

With the CAN, Richard focuses on existing non-profit partners and their clients, as well as increasing the exposure of the Coordinated Assistance Network to a broader population through dynamic story telling. As the CAN moves into the larger social service sector, his compassion for people and their differences, will strengthen the mission of the organization to make other people's lives better.

The CAN will leverage Richard's experience in product knowledge, development, as well as public speaking, and training. As the CAN continues to expand and work with communities across the U.S., Richard's intuition, ethics, and intelligence will undoubtedly create sustainable growth and lasting relationships.

Richard is no stranger to giving back. For several years, he coached youth football where he mentored young athletes. As a coach, he facilitated communication, self-expression, and provided support for kids who feel maligned by society, especially during the transitional stage of early adulthood. He is the father of 4 amazing young adult children and lives in the Tampa Bay area where he continues to lead others where the opportunity is presented.
